The President and the Tariff

MONDAY, DEC. 6, 1954

MR. ARNOLD HEENEY, CANAdian ambassador to Washington, told a Los Angeles audience that Canada is expecting a reduction in the American tariff. If the United States fails to accept the proper role of the world's great creditor, Mr. Heeney said, its failure will cause grave disappointment in this country, as elsewhere. While the Canadian ambassador was thus speaking with unusual can-dor President Eisenhower was preparing to meet the tariff question head-on at the opening of the new Congress, early in 1955. Washington dispatches indicate that he launch a three-pronged attack on the existing trade policy of the nation.

First, he will ask the Congress to implement the report of the Ran-Commission, which was laid aside this year because it was bound to split the Republican Party in the fall election.

The report is a pretty pallid document, falling far short of the President's obvious desires, but it would provide at least a beginning in the systematic reduction of the tariff. Also, it would renew for three years the present reciprocal trade agreements legislation under which the President is authorized to negotiate tariff reductions with other nations on a reciprocal basis without Congressional interference. This legislation was extended for only one year last summer. Secondly, Mr. Eisenhower will ask the Congress to endorse the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Up to now the American Government has observed GATT, with a few minor infractions, but it has never been submitted to the Congress. Why the President proposes to risk an unfavorable vote on it is not clear. Probably he feels certain of approval and is determined to put the Congress on record behind his policy. Thirdly, the Government will ask treaty with Japan modeled, apparent-ly, on Canada's present treaty and obviously needed to fortify Japan's. weak economy.

Besides thus tackling the problem of trade directly through the tariff, the President is determined to continue foreign aid to backward countries, especially in Asia, and he supports the establishment of a new in-ternational agency, with a capital of $100 millions, to underwrite private foreign investment.

To those who believe in expanding the world's trade as the only sure way of expanding its prosperity, the President's program must appear modest indeed. But it will be more important in its results than it appears in its letter.

It will prove, if adopted, that the United States is not moving backward into protectionism but forward, however slowly, into freer trade. It will thus create a new confidence throughout a world long haunted by old nightmare of Republican tariffs:

In going even this far the President has decided to face a sharp and open break in his own party. A large group of Republicans in the Congress, something like a half, will oppose his policy. It will have to be carried through by the President's formal opposition, the Democrats.

If this situation exposes him to wrecking inter-party strains and some humiliation, he seems ready to accept them. He has taken a long time to make up his mind about trade policy but if it is made up now appears certain that he can get what he wants from a Democrat

Congress As Mr. Heeney indicates, no nation will await the result of his struggle more eagerly than Canada, for it sells almost two-thirds of its exports in the American market.

Quite recently a British Member of Parliament said, "Nothing much happens in Britain except miracles!"

Rather a remarkable statement riake, yet, when one begins to think, what he said was true Strange to say, and stranger still to have to say if, Britain is doing all she is able to do under the circumstances to cement the Commonwealth.

Your correspondent, Mrs. Marshall, seems misinformed, for Britain is certainly not "looking for a place to settle in our Canada for her Royalty." This is not a one-sided affair Mrs. Marshall. Canadian personages are in turn entertained in Britain, and the hospitality and courtesy received there is remarked on by all and sundry who visit Britain. Who Knows What It Will Do?

GRAVE debate-the gravest since ' the "bad actor" is radioactive strontium,

A GRAVE debate—the gravest since the debate on whether to make the hydrogen bomb—is now going on behind closed doors in the highest government the debate is concircles. Primarily, this debate is con-cerned with whether the "Super-Super"—a hydrogen bomb expected to develop several times the monstrous power of the great bomb exploded at Eniwefok last spring—should be tested. In a more general sense, the debate is also con-cerned with whether the United States is, right to rely on the hydrogen bomb as its principal offensive weapon. Both issues are related directly to the danger to human life inherent in the ra-diological side-effects of the new type of hydrogen bomb. There is nothing properly secret about this radiological dange Arything known in the U.S. on the sub-ject is certainly known in Russia, where the new type of hydrogen bomb, with its heavy, noxious radiological side-effects, was first tested.

Indeed, the real trouble is that no one in Russia, in this country, or anywhere else, really knows enough about this sub-ject. The most distinguished experts hotly disagree about the nature and the extent of the danger.

VARIED BELIEFS

These reporters have recently been in voluminous correspondence with ph cists, geneticists, and other experts this matter of the radiological hazard and have yet to find two who wholly agree. On the official level also, there is a wide variation between the estimates of the danger made by the Atomic ergy Commission and the Defense

The AEC's conclusions are less frightening than the Pentagon's-although the AEC in its secret studies is by no means as reassuring as its official statements on this subject. The radiological hazard falls into three parts—local fall-out, distant fall-out, and general radioactivity. The phenomenon of local fall-out, which transforms the hydrogen bomb from a city-destroying to a state-paralyzing weapon by blanketing an area of 4,000 square miles with radioactive dust, has already been described in this space.

Distant fall-out is caused by the lighter particles radio-activated in the explosion. These particles enter the up-per atmosphere and they then fall out capriciously anywhere on earth. Wherever this fall out occurs there is a temporary, local increase in the level of radio-activity.

DISTANT FALL-OUTS

After the Eniwetok tests, there were a number of such distant fall-outs at scattered points in the United States, notably in the Middle West, in Florida, and in the area of Washington, D.C. Most experts believe that distant fail-out causes no immediate danger to liv-ing persons, since, on its voyage round the earth on the high winds the radio active material loses much of its power. Some experts, however, like Dr. A. H. Sturtevant of California, do believe that local increases in the radiation levels may lead to "an increase in the probability of malignant growths."

Distant fall-out may also present a danger to the human foetus—also here again the experts disagree. In this case, produced in massive quantities in the fire-ball of the new type of hydrogen bomb. Strontium has the characteristic of settling in the bone structure—once it enters the body, radio strontium therefore becomes a permanent part of the body and constantly irradiates the body ceils.

The human foetus is peculiarly sensitive to radiation, particularly before the twentieth week, since its cells are increasing at a prodigious rate. A particularly heavy fall-out of strontium thus might reach and harm or destroy the foetus through a complicated cattle-milk motherfoetus chain.

Some experts, to be sure, hotly deny that there is any danger of increased incidence of cancer or stillbirths from distant fall-out. But there does seem to be general agreement that a long-term "biological hazard" exists, in that, at some point, increased levels of radio-activity will damage the genes. This in turn will increase the production of human mutations, or monsters, to use the word to which some geneticists object. danger here is not to living persons, but to future generations.

there is the u ard—the danger that "repeated atomic explosions will lead to a degree of general radioactivity which no one can tolerate or escape." to use the words of the British Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Edgar Adrian. It is this danger, which will be examined further in another report, which has particularly obsessed British Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill, since he learned the facts about the Entwoods to the control of the control

INNER DEBATE

All this is enough to suggest why there is a debate in progress in the inner circles of the government. No one can really be sure what radiological side effects a testing of so terrible a weapon as the Super-Super might have, The AEC's radiation experts grossly underestimated the radiation hazard from the Eniwetok tests, and thus the Marshall Islanders and the Japanese crewmen of the Fortunate Dragwere ' endangered The experts could be wrong again.

No one can really be sure, moreover, at just what "megatonnage level" (re-peated explosions of) the hydrogen bomb, our principal offensive weapon, might de-stroy, not only the enemy, but all life on earth. Indeed, this is the most terrifying fact about this terrifying weapon that no one really knows what it made me laugh.

It showed a husband returning from work to find his wife still in her dressing gown and stretched out on an easy chair with her feet well propped and a book in simply: "I didn't know where to begin, so I didn't." This I found extremely funny. The rest of my family didn't. Too close to the truth maybe, though I've never actually done this. Just thought about it, But November's awful spell of rain drove me to drowning my sorrows in Ruth books whenever possible. Housewifery and sense of duty were completely washed away.

The first book on my list of sin-for in Canada it's considered a sin to read when you might be cleaning house—was "The Table Talk of Samuel Marchbanks." I'd read it before, but I like to go back to it from time to

And of all the pithy passages that I enjoyed, my favorite goes: "There are times when I think the reading I have done in the past has had no effect except to cloud my mind and make me indecisive. However, when I look at the determined non-readers among my acquaintance I feel that there may something in reading after all! Heigh-ho for a liberal education!

The second book was "Mariana," by Mon-ica Dickens, which I picked up in a paper back edition. I'm glad to have it for my own because it makes me laugh out loud, and very few modern novels can do that. (Earle Bir-"Turvey" did-but it was a different

The Bookmobile brought me the third book of the rainy spell-"No More Meadows," also by Monica Dickens. The title is taken from a passage by Robert Louis Stevenson which says, more or less, that times are changed for him who marries because there are no more pleasant bypaths through the meadows where

THE other day I came across a cartoon that he may innocently linger, but the way lies long and straight and dusty to the grave.

What fun it is to find someone laughing with high good humor at the curious and unnatural institution we call marriage. Canadian writers don't laugh at things like that. In fact, if they study their, list of taboos carefully, they know the sacred cows in Canada are so numerous that there's practically nothing left to laugh about at all. Adolescent still, that's what we are. Deadly serious about the serious things of life.

But to return to Monica Dickens. I admire her novels very much indeed. I admire them for the humor, the vivid one-sentence descriptions, the clearly-drawn secondary characters, the sureness of the dialogues, the understanding of very different human types. Often she is cruel as in "a cost with a collar, like a run-over cat" or "a woman with cut-away nostrils." But the cruelty, to my mind, doesn't matter since she never mocks the feeble or the old, and the over-all impression left by her books is one of intense humanity. She knows, in a descriptive passage, what to leave out and what to leave in. And that's something a lot of novelists have yet to learn.

The fourth book to keep me from my usework was "The Well of Loneliness," by Radclyffe Hall. In my youth this book was banned and forbidden. People discussed it in horrified whispers. I found it quite casually among the blood and lust of the pocketbook in the local drugstore.

I read it with my eyes popping open, and marvelled at the rhythmic beat of its prose. And, finishing it, I thought of how my mother told me that when she was a child Olive Schreiner's "Story of an African Farm" was the forbidden book. She read it all in eager gulps, hiding behind a big armchair in an English drawing room. And several decades later, H. G. Weils' "Ann Veronica" was frowned upon as immoral.

But let's not get started on fashions in literature and morals. I MUST do the breakfast dishes and tackle the beds.

tor, disregarded my advice and easily talked her into letting him operate. As so often happens in these cases, the woman is now very proud of her doctor if only because, as she thinks, her operation must have been so tremendously difficult; she was on the table five hours, which she and her doctor thought was an enviable record-something should be written up in a medical jour nal! Knowing that there was no reason for any difficulty in the operation, and knowing that any good surgeon could have performed it in an hour or so, my hunch was strong that the man who did the work was so untrained in surgery that he had to poke around hours, confused, and not knowing what to do next As a logical result of so long an operation, the poor woman had to have two trans-fusions; she got a pneumonia, and then a phlebitis, and was desperately ill for six But, as she said, her doctor wonderful; he was heroic, and finally he pulled her through. She was so proud of him and so devoted to him that she was advising all of her friends to go to him.

EXPOSED BY RECORD

Following my hunch, I looked up the doctor in the medical directory and found. as I expected, that he was not a surgeon he had graduated from a poor college; there was no record that he had ever had an internship or any training in surgery, and he was not good enough to be a member of any medical society.

Fortunately, today, in many of the better hospitals, a man like that is not allowed to operate; he is not given the facilities of the operating room. But there are still many small unapproved hospitals in which almost anyone can operate, and in which no questions will be asked, even if the organs re-moved from the patients are usually perfectly normal.

I am stimulated to write this note because of my good friend. Greer Williams' remarkable article (Saturday Evening Post, Nov. 13) about a man who for years posed as a physician, and without any training medicine or surgery, in a number of hospitals, performed many operations. One wonders how he could have done it. With all my wide training in medicine, and with all of my knowledge of diseased organs and the principles of surgery (which the faker did not have). I could not have done what

Mr. Williams may some day go on to write up some of the men in this country who, in spite of their inadequate training in medicine, and no training in surgery, are operating every day on admiring and devoted

One of the curses of civilization is noise and one of the joys of the country (far from a highway) is peace and quiet. The other night, in a downtown hotel in a great city, I was waked repeatedly by noises from the street below. People in automobiles were loudly tooting the horn and racing the motor and every so often a truck would roar by a bunch of drunks from a night club, calling one another and banging their doors until everyone in the rooms nearby must have been waked up. But this wasn't all: up from the main dining room of the hotel kept coming the roar of an orchestra playing as loudly as their audience were a half mile away. And as if this were not enough, when the soloist sang, he used a powerful amplifier so that he, too, made a tremendous racket. I wonder if many persons really like an orchestra which plays so loud that it is alsible to hear what one's neighbor some people do love such a din. Certain it of the evening's work.

This sort of thing should be very tiring because the noise beats in on the brain and serves as a bruising stimulus. Somewhere believe there is an anti-noise society. its members well; may they work harder and get things accomplished!

Canucks lost the services of defenseman John Reeve mid-way through the second pe-riod. The extent of the injury was not known, Reeve being disabled from a heavy bodycheck. He was also clipped on the head by a stick.

Ed Dorohoy, by his two assists at New Westminster, became a serious challenger for the scoring lead. Dorohoy now is one point behind Rronco Horvath, of Edmonton Flyers, who was blanked Saturday along with the Flyers. Horhas 39 points, Doroand Colin Kilburn of Cougars share the lead in assists with 22

Andy Hebenton of Cougars with 32 points is running fourth in the individual scor-ing parade, while Kilburn is eighth and Anderson 12th.

Only player activity over the week-end saw the Can acquire left-winger Earl Johnson from the Quebec Aces, their part of the deal that saw Camille Henry of the Rangers go to the Aces. Johnson is a former member of the Edmonston Flyers. He scored 37 goals and had 34 assists for the Flyers in the 1951-52 season and 26 goals and 34 assists in the 1952-53 season

Niagara Loans

You might think that rates on loans are exactly the same from company to company. This is an idea that could cost you money, for Niagara Finance has a rate structure that is lower in many cases, and here's the reason why. It's a matter of policy with Niagara to believe that it is no more trouble to make a loan of say, $750 than it is $100.00 . . . and, if the rate of charge was exactly the same on both loans we'd obviously make more money on a $750.00 loan. So we work on the idea that on loans for larger amounts the rate should run "downbill", while at the same time rates on smaller amounts are standard Resides that we think while at the same time rates on smaller amounts are stand-ard. Besides that, we think you'll like our idea of having loans to $1500 life-insured at no extra cost to you. That's the sort of protection that a family man can appreciate. Come in and see us if you need money; we'd like to meet you.

PROMINENT CITIZEN & WIFE NARROWLY ESCAPE COUGAR

GOON CENTRE, V.I.-Abernethy Goon, leading citizen of this bustling community, and his wife, Mrs. Goon, had a *narrow escape from a cougar last night.

They were driving along the road into town at a late hour, nearly 8 p.m., when the incident occurred. Mrs. Goon was seated in the back seat, driving, and

Mr. Goon was at the wheel in the front seat. Not far from the centre of town, Mrs. Goon espied a tawny object in the headlights of the car. The tawny object had flashing yellow eyes.

"Ab," Mrs. Goon said, calmly, "Stop the car. There is a tawny object ahead. It has flashing eyes."

Mr. Goon accordingly stopped the car and looked at the ect. "It is a cougar," he stated. "Ab," Mrs. Goon said, just as calm as before, "Start the car and take me home THIS MINUTE!"

Unfortunately, Mr. Goon became excited and stalled the car. The cougar kept on approaching and came closer and closer until it was at the side of the car, ready to spring to

At this point, Mrs. Goon, continuing to remain calm,

Mr. Goon managed, somehow, to start the car again, and the two sped to safety, although Mr. Goon had some difficulty with the wheel as Mrs. Goon in the back seat could not drive while fainted.

Later in the evening, a government cougar hunter went to the scene looking for the cougar and found out it was Mitzi, the Goon's tortoise shell cat which had gone out to

Mr. Goon explained the reason he thought Mitzi was a cougar was, he was looking through the wrong half of his

Victoria hostesses have discovered a new way of entertaining. It's at Sunday afternoon symphony concerts, followed by a buffet supper or high tea in their own homes

The idea was started by Mrs. Elza Mayhew, a member of the women's committee of the Victoria Symphony Society, who suggested sending two tickets to each member of the society, with the hint that they entertain their friends at last Sunday afternoon's concert. Judging by the many friendly groups in the loyer at intermission and who also more than half-filled the theatre it was a happy thought. Smiling happily at being back in her home town for a week week visit was Mrs. Charles Ossulston, who arrived from San Francisco on Saturday evening, "I've not stopped talking since l'arrived," she said. "It's wonderful to be back in Victoria!" Mrs. Ossulston was wear Bessle ing a black afternoon dress with pear necklet short fur jacket. She reports seeing Miss Margaret Fletcher of this city just before she left San Francisco. Miss Fletcher is traveling in the southern States and does not expect to come back to Victoria for several months. Miss Kay Riley, who is attending university in California, will be arriving in Victoria in about a week's time, Mrs. Ossulston says. Miss Riley is living at International House and when Mr. and Mrs. Ossulston dined there with her recently they met someone from nearly every country in the Mother and daughter twosomes at the Sunday afternoon co cert included Mrs. Herbert W. Richards and Penelope. A black afternoon formal was Mrs. Richard's choice of gown with a small corsage of gay red and white Christmas bells at her throat. The linkle of bells sounded from the stiff petticoat she wore under the swirling skirt of her dress and at her ankies were clusters of the same gay decorations that were in her corsage. A Balenciaga toreador hat completed the effect. Penelope was dressed in candy stripe print frock with tiny rolled white collar under her demure Supply Linens

Mrs. Jack Barraclough attended the concert with her small for YMCA Rooms daughter Sally and her son Neil. Sally wore a soft blue frock with pink ruffle at her neck, a deep red velvet coat with white fur Pillows, mattresses and sheets

A moss green dress with bright red scarf at her throat and small red hat was Mrs. Barraclough's choice for the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dowling and Mr. and Mrs. E. Hansen were together at the concert. Mrs. Dowling was wearing a black and white ensemble and Mrs. Hansen was in grey with jacket of grey and brown diagonal stripes.

Mrs. F. S. Appleton presided and brown diagonal stripes.

Mrs. L. M. Shore attended with daughter Catherine. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon King where there, the latter in green with mink jacket. Mr. and Mrs. Ted McLeod attended with their daughter Fielder, B. Carruthers, H. L. Margaret, who chattered handle of the mink specific properties of the mink provided and Mrs. H. Fielder, B. Carruthers, H. L. Margaret, who chattered happily with her cousin, Jane Gilliland, Campbell and J. Dicksor during the intermission.

Adding just that exotic touch needed to round out the after. thanked Mrs. Honor on behalf Adding just that exolic fouch needed to round out the after noon was the exquisite gown worn by the soloist of the concert.

Miss Margaret Ann Ireland. It was of black lace and net, the very full, floor-length skirt caught at the side with huge pink roses. The low-cut decolletage was filled in with pleated pink net. Miss Ireland received a bouquet of complementing bebe chrysanthemums from the women's committee of the symphony society.

who has hit the big time after starting in Canadian radio and

Last year she gained a lot of attention when she moved to New York and was featured on the Dave Garroway Show. Canadians, who hadn't been too interested in her until then, sat and up and took notice. But they didn't do too

Before any reaction came Shirley Harmer from this side of the border, the old granddaddy up for regular appearances on his radio and television shows.

But Shirley has not entirely deserted

She is making weekly trips to Toronto to star in "Showtime," which appears at 9.30 p.m. on Channel 2 on Sundays. A program of songs and dance routines, it is seen on all Canadian television stations. There's a new voice down at CKDA

It belongs to Bill Pike, former chief announcer of CKMO on the mainland.

Big Bill, and I mean BIG, is married and has one child. He began working behind the mike at 'MO in 1943. For a while he went to Eastern Canada, working at various stations before returning to this coast.

Bill, who has a booming, deep kind of voice that commands attention, will be reading the news down at 'DA.

mystery object was located at a depth of 540 feet, 180 feet headed thing with an ungainly above the bed of the Scottish body and a tail about 18 feet what looked like a fin on its loch were the monster is re-long.

Their "monster," they reported, is 50 feet long and has approximately eight legs and the silhouette of a gigantic scorpion.

The echo-sounder charts under-water depths and schools of fish by recording the time a sound takes to echo back to the device. Peter Anderson of the Rival's crew reported the mystery object was located at The graph, showed a small-moving through the discovery said they saw something with three big humps.
